Computer games in process of radicalization

Presented by Lancaster and Morecambe College

"Shooting" as a means of recruiting children and youth to radicalization organization.

These organizations are using games because it is a platform where you can meet young people and recruit them.

"If you are seriously engaged in marketing and want to reach out to some target group, you are trying to be where they are".

Your friend says to you:

“I found a very interesting community for people who are playing in “Call of duty”. We are discussing and improving our gaming skills on this forum. I will send you the link.

The name of this community is “Jih Ad Ist forum”. Also, if you complete all the tasks given to you by the leaders, you will have the opportunity to `level up` and gain ranks next to the avatars. I noticed that I`m getting more aggressive while playing, and honestly, I`m so immersed in the game that I don`t want to talk to my family.

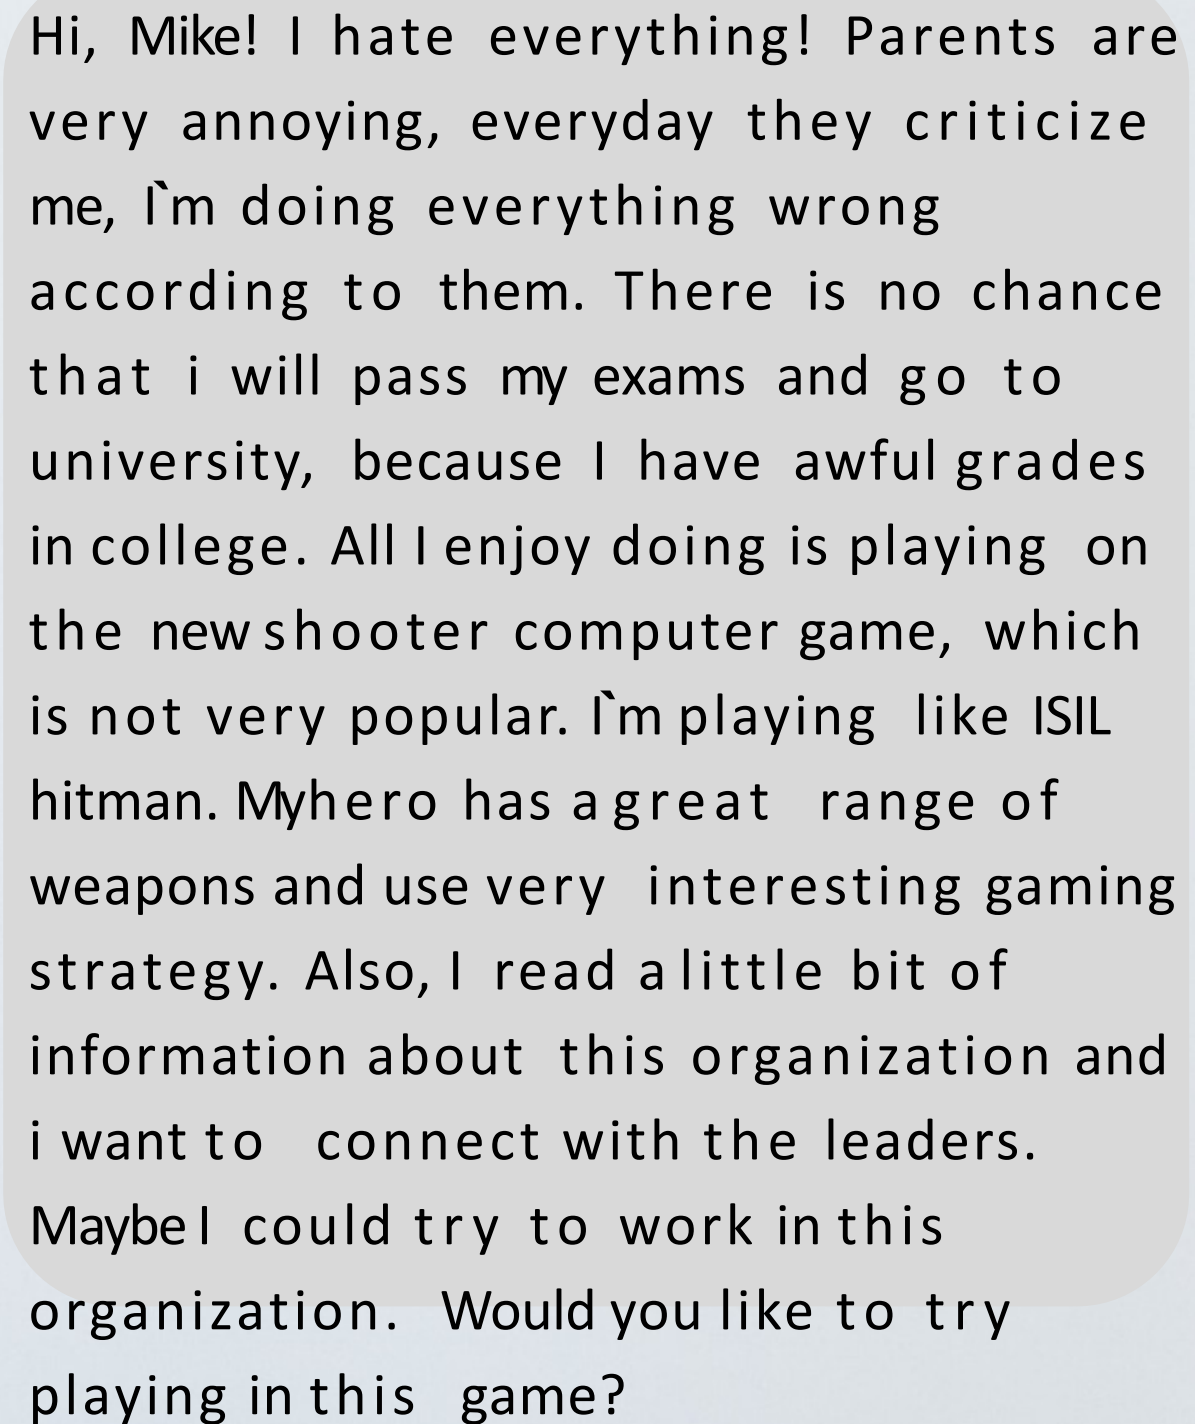

But I`m proud of my achievements in-game and my ranks on the forum and if I achieve the highest level of avatar we will meet with guys from the forum community in real life and have more important real tasks! You should try it too.”

What would you do in this case?

You have a letter from a friend.

What do you think about this situation?

Hi, Mike! I hate everything! Parents are very annoying, everyday they criticize me, I'm doing everything wrong according to them. There is no chance that i will pass my exams and go to university, because I have awful grades in college. All I enjoy doing is playing on the new shooter computer game, which is not very popular. I'm playing like ISIL hitman. Myhero has a great range of weapons and use very interesting gaming strategy. Also, I read a little bit of information about this organization and i want to connect with the leaders. Maybe I could try to work in this organization. Would you like to try playing in this game?

You notice that your friend is playing a strange mobile game all the time.

- What is this game about?

- Oh, it's my friend who recommended to me and I'm interested in this game. In this game, the colour of your skin is your uniform in the battle for the survival of your kind. Your main task is to save White Race, it depends on you to secure its existence. The player controls a neo-Nazi skinhead or a Klansman and is tasked with killing Africans, Mexicans and Jews. Would you like to try?

What do you think about this game?

What do you want to say to your friend?

DON'T LET ANYONE CONTROL YOU
